Here are 8 Educational Principles that guide education for sustainable development:

- Ensure that participants are actively involved in the learning/teaching process.
- Empower participants to make informed decisions and take real-life actions on sustainability issues.
- Encourage active collaborative work and engage their communities in creating solutions.
- Cultivate in participants the ability to analyze knowledge and experiences to develop critical thinking and openness to change.
- Promote cultural practices as an integral part of sustainability.
- Share inspiring stories of achievements, failures, and values, to learn from them and support each other.
- Continuously explore, test, and share innovative approaches, methodologies, and techniques.
- Ensure continuous improvement through the monitoring and evaluation of our programs.
